

MATT GLOWACKI

2014's BEST SPEAKER

After winning 2010 & 2013's Best Diversity Artist, and having now been named the 2014 Speaker of the year, Matt Glowacki continues to make his unique impact on the diversity conversation at colleges and universities around the country. Whether it is through highlighting the hidden messages behind some of the most popular television programs of the day in his event, "Diversity According to Family Guy & South Park," or sharing his ideas about finding fulfillment and enjoyment in life through conducting his "Doing Happiness" symposiums, Matt is always able to draw on the education and the experience he has gleaned from being born without legs. He teaches through the use of personal stories and insights from his life to relate and connect with his audiences. Sharing personal moments and building commonality allow him to connect larger ideas and make lasting impacts on the people he speaks with. Most commonly seen on campus with his black polo shirt and a huge welcoming smile, Matt's openness about life and willingness to engage with anyone about anything keeps campuses asking for him again.

Some of the best conversations occur with him during the question and answer time or even after the event is over. When the students line up to share their stories or take time to ask the question that is the most important to them, but possibly too personal to be addressed in front of the entire audience.

Matt is no stranger to being recognized with awards from many different organizations, associations, and groups, but winning "Campus Activities Magazine's Speaker of the Year" award this year is truly an honor for him because of the process involved in being nominated and finally winning the award. Matt wants to acknowledge and thank CAM for having actual open voting electing the winners. It really gives the readers and the people in the market the say in who receives the recognition in the categories.

For more information contact Coleman Productions at 866-328-3762 or
brooke@colemanproductions.com

RUNNER UP: SEX SIGNALS